CONTINUING GALE PREVENTS LINER
POWHATAN FROM BEING TOWED IN

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Continuance of the heavy gale which has impeded the army transport Powhatan and its 271 passengers for more than 60 hours caused the abandonment of another attempt to tow the steamer to shore, it was reported by wireless here today. The latest news indicated the destroyers Sharkey and O'Leary are standing by the disabled ship which was towed 18 miles toward Halifax this morning by the Western Comet. A message received by the naval radio station here from Captain Randall stated that weather conditions compelled the abandonment of any attempt to tow the transport in. In a radio to the army transport depot today Captain Randall stated that weather conditions compelled the abandonment of any attempt to tow the transport in. In a radio to the army transport depot today Captain Randall made no mention of the fact that the ship had been towed 18 miles, it was said.

FARM PRODUCT SHOW AT CAPITAL
ATTRACTING STATE-WIDE INTEREST

HARRISBURG, Jan. 21.—Agricultural reconstruction in Pennsylvania is the message given to several thousand farmers as they visited the many exhibitions of improved methods and the huge buildings containing 20th Century farm machinery. In its highest development, the fourth annual farm product show today opened the second day of the show which brought hundreds of additional farmers to Harrisburg. The break in the cold spell of the past several days made it possible for a great many women to attend. The program today consisted of a routine of lectures covering every phase of farm life. This evening a meeting will be held under the auspices of the state Chamber of Commerce and the visiting farmers will hear prominent business and farm experts.

BARNETT AND GRANT ARE CALLED IN INVESTIGATION OF NAVAL AWARD

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Major General Barnett, commandant of the Marine Corps and Admiral Grant who commanded battle fleet No. 1 during the war testified today that their recommendations for war naval awards had been given little weight by the Navy department. They appeared before the Senate Naval Affairs sub-committee investigating the award of medals. Admiral Grant charged that Thomas A. Edison had little or nothing to do with perfecting of submarines. The Admiral also declared he recommended distinguished service medals to all commanders of battle ships under him but that Captain Page who commanded the Minnesota which was torpedoed was the only one who was given a medal. The others were given naval crosses.

BE CENSURED FOR HIS STATEMENTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Senator Watson, of Montana today asked the Senate to adopt a resolution censuring Rear Admiral Sims for making public his memorandum that Secretary Daniels stated when he received his orders not to let the British pull the wool over his eyes and that he would just as soon fight the British as Germany.

ROADS IMPASSABLE

That Clearfield business men appreciate the fact that impassable roads deter folks from trading in Clearfield was borne out when several carloads of live-wire merchants started out to break the roads between here and Philipsburg.

The recent snows have filled the roads bank full of tightly packed "beautiful" until getting thru is a matter of luck more than anything else.

This is a step forward in the right direction for the good of this city and these men deserve the thanks of every business man in the city.

Most of the cars got thru but there was one that started that did not get very far. However as Rudyard Kipling would say that's a story for grown ups.

Good evening We are still here

Looks as though the treaty were going to take the death route too

Mr. Public Spirited Stockholder of the Park Association: Be sure to remember your meeting next Monday.

Starting as the Sims revelations are, it is not apparent that any great amount of public opinion is going to back up the admiral in his charges. If mistakes of administration were made, and undoubtedly many were made, it is not the funeral of Mr. Sims and his dumping of the whole wash into the fine laundry does not tend to clean Mr. Sims' skirt

The statement to Sims before he departed for Europe, strong as it sounds was undoubtedly good advice if taken literally and that was no doubt the intention. The warning not to let Britain pull the wool over his eyes, we take, was a mere figure of speech and was to be applied to any of the allied nations. We were in the war, roughly speaking, to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for all and not for any one nation in preference to any other.

Some two or three months ago Probation Officer John A. Stock appealed to The Progress in the interest of a little three years old boy who had been cast on the rocks of domestic difficulties and faced going through life with its attendant difficulties. The mother was perfectly aware that her struggle to give the little chap all that was his due in life would not be successful and reluctantly heeded the advice of older and wiser heads that she entrust the raising of the little fellow to someone better equipped in this world's goods. A little want advertisement was inserted in The Progress and there were many requests from homes which needed only the company of a little child to make life complete. Finally from the list Mr. Stock selected the home for the boy. Today he is being taken care of in fine shape and the mother may be happy in the thought that her loved one is in kind and loving hands and will grow to full manhood to respect and revere her. It may be a cold old world but there are some warm places in it after all

UNSEATING SOCIALIST OFFICERS

Up until today those responsible for the disbarment of the Socialist members of the New York state assembly have not produced reasons for their action which will win the approval of public opinion or stand the test under the constitution of the United States. Unless the prosecutors in the case have something up their sleeve which they have not yet made public it will appear that the proceedings are a deliberate attempt at high handed usurpation of authority and an illegal restraint of the right of peoples under the constitution to choose their own legislators. We do not subscribe to a single tenet of the Socialist doctrine but the attempted persecution of members of that creed will serve only one purpose—and that a bad one—an increasing feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction

Temporizing with a lawless element or an anarchistically inclined individual is not desired and must not be tolerated. Fear of further unrest must not be the motive or purpose of any letup in the thorough cleansing of our populace as now being carried out by the Department of Justice. There is, however, a vast difference between the deportation of an alien and the disbarment of a citizen from the legislative halls of government and its resultant disqualification of the voters who cast their ballot for those disbarred

There is no parallel between the New York state case and the Berger case. Berger had already been found guilty by the court of law and the court of public opinion.

Patriotism And Saving

During the War everyone saved as a patriotic duty. The savings of the people helped materially in winning the War.

In time of Peace it is just as much a patriotic duty to save. The Business of the Nation must depend on the savings of the people for capital

Have Pains?
Aches and pains seem to be the lot of the ordinary mortal. However, these should be taken simply as nature's warning signals that some part of the human machine is out of order. It is a mistake to resign one's self to physical torture when the cause can be removed.
Foley Kidney Pills
tone up weak, inactive, sluggish kidneys and help rid the blood of poisons, waste matter that causes aches and pains in arms and legs, backache, rheumatic pains, sore muscles, stiff or swollen joints.
Isaac B. Jurnman, Aubury Park N.Y. writes: "My back caused me a great deal of trouble for some time. I experienced sharp, shooting pains which were due to the condition of my kidneys. One bottle of Foley Kidney Pills completely relieved me. The pain is never back." I recommend Foley Kidney Pills to my friends.

George Washington shaved himself

ON occasion. One of these occasions was when his faithful servant allowed his hand to slip—whereupon the General arose in his wrath and finished the job himself; for the Father of our Country was very properly fond of a good, clean shave.

And in his simple shaving kit may still be seen his equally simple razors. While their model is many hundred years old, they have never been bettered in left, or shearing width, or right shaving angle on the face.

At such times when his old servant failed him, Washington would have appreciated the guarded, two edged blade of the Durham-Duplex because he would have found it nothing more than his own well-loved model made safe.

DURHAM-DUPLEX A Real Razor—made Safe

Exactly the same shape and balance in the hand that uncoupled generations of shavers have brought to perfection—with these extra advantages: (1) a guarded blade that can't cut your face. (2) a double-edged blade for economy's sake. (3) a detachable blade for the luxury of a fresh edge at a moment's notice.

(4) a strappable blade, so that you don't have to throw good steel away. And it's the longest, strongest, keenest, best-tempered blade on earth. Seven million shavers have found that the Durham-Duplex gives them more shaving mileage than any other safety razor. Get your Durham-Duplex today.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

The lecture in the opera house Monday evening, being the third entertainment given under the auspices of the High School, was reasonably well attended, and the subject of the lecturer, "The Making of Man," was one of much interest and instruction. The young people of today do not see much to learn from a good lecture as their parents did in days of yore. If the entertainment had been of the frivolous nature, the large auditorium would have been crowded from pillar to post with young folks. The middle-aged who were present and were able to follow the speaker closely found many things in his theme to interest them and furnish solid food for after-thought for days to come.

The funeral of Mrs. Rebecca Gates was held from her late home yesterday afternoon. A large concourse of friends gathered at the house to take the last farewell of the one they loved while on earth. Her remains were laid at rest in the family plot close to the side of her husband.

There is one industry that Curwensville is badly in need of or perhaps worse than any other just at present, and that is an up-to-date steam laundry. One that will do all kinds of washing and ironing, and not confine its work to fancy shirts and collars. Curwensville has never had a good laundryman since Alfred Lavender removed from town to Renova. There has been a half dozen slovenly Chinamen here since that time, but their work was so rotten that patrons would not stand for it, and they were forced to get out and go elsewhere to ply their trade. The people would patronize a good laundry willingly.

Do not forget that, on Thursday evening the second meeting of that new organization, which promises so much for the town's welfare, will be held in the High School building, where it will be given a name. Curwensville citizens should reach a point to get to this meeting and learn all about the advantages it will be for them to attach their names to its constitution and become members. A good many years ago an old deacon in the Methodist church needed the writer one bright Sunday morning, and said to him: "Come, go along to church; it will not hurt you if it does not do you any good." That is why we urge upon the people of Curwensville to attend the meeting, and get in out of the wet, and if the meeting does not hurt you it will do you some good eventually.

Miss Dot LaBord attended a week-end party at State College.

CHARITABLE ACT APPRECIATED

The Ladies' Aid Society in charge of the Children's Home have in their hands this day, making ends meet for the best of little folks being maintained at this splendid institution.

The Sewing Committee, which meets one day a week at the home for the purpose of sewing and mending for the little people have been handicapped for some time by lack of a sewing machine. Not having available funds, sufficient to purchase a machine the committee went to W. P. Shneider, the Second Street merchant, to secure the loan of a machine to help them with their excess of work.

When the situation was explained to Mr. Shneider that gentleman very promptly and very generously loaned a brand new $75 machine on his delivery truck and before the committee could get back to their sewing had the same installed in the sewing room at the home.

The Progress happened to stumble onto the facts in the case and takes pleasure in mentioning this generous action despite the fact that Mr. Shneider expressly forbids any mention of his donation.

A PRETTY DOUBLE CHURCH WEDDING

A pretty double wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Gallitzin on Wednesday morning, January 14th, when Miss Genevieve Talney, daughter of Mrs. Mary Talney, of that place, became the bride of Frank Garabedian, of Phillipsburg, and Miss Regina Miller, also of Gallitzin, the bride of Charles Wise, of Crescon. The double ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father J. J. Deary, rector of the church.

Following an Eastern honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Garabedian will reside in Phillipsburg and Mr. and Mrs. Wise in Crescon.

Mr. Garabedian is the very capable interior decorator at Adelman & Radowitz's "Big Store," and one of Phillipsburg's most genial and popular young men. His charming young bride may be assured of a hearty welcome to our city, and we voice the sentiment of the community when we speak for the happy couple a future of great happiness and prosperity.

A way to do the Family Washing in 15 Minutes

Wouldn't you esteem it a blessing if you could have the toil and muss of the family washing all over within ten or fifteen minutes?

A dream? Not at all—for it can be done. Here is the recipe.

First ten minutes—Gather up the family washing and make a list of it.

Next four minutes—Wrap securely into a bundle.

Last minute—Telephone our Laundry.

Total time expenditure—Fifteen minutes.

Time saved—Ten to fifteen hours.

When our driver calls, he also gathers up the untidiness and drudgery of washday—and leaves for you, leisure for more womanly activities.

Meanwhile your washing is at our laundry being cleansed with thoroughness and a consummate care that no laundress can excel. There is no boiling or rubbing to fray fabrics and wear out clothes. We achieve cleanliness by gentle soaping and rinsing in clear, soft water and pure white suds. Your clothes are daintily finished, too, and returned to you sweet and spotless.

Reduce your washday to fifteen minutes by sending your family washing to us. A telephone call will bring our driver.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside, no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head, no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy and stomach pain, you must begin on the inside like you begin on the outside. This is easily most important, because the skin pores do not absorb poisons into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify, and freshen the entire alimentary tract before eating more food.

Get a quarter pound of Limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless. Drink limestone hot water every morning to rid your system of those vile poisons and toxins also to prevent their formation.

The number of people this county is supporting in asylums and other refuges is appalling and the cost to the county is beyond the knowledge of a great many citizens. Our duty to these unfortunate is plain and no amount of expense necessary to their comfort and well being should be spared. In this issue we set forth a great deal of information on this matter. Sooner or later Clearfield County will face the necessity of providing for these people within our borders. Whether that time is at hand is a matter of uncertainty but the problem warrants the serious consideration of county officials.

Dabbling in politics for gain or preferment is mighty poor business for anybody or any organization, particularly a newspaper, which if it is to command and hold the respect of its readers, must be above the domination of political pirates. Many a newspaper has been cast on the shoals of financial ruin through its hope to the ashpit of a political organization. A newspaper is made by its subscribers and the interest of the newspaper must be for the best interests of its subscribers. May we always remember that the true meaning of politics is the science of government and not the art of public office manipulation. Whenever politicians divert their attention from the science of government and indulge in greedy and selfish practices they lay themselves open to comment and criticism.

Local business men are behind a movement soon to be launched looking to the placing of another train on the Tyrone and Clearfield branch of the Pennsylvania or at least having the existing train advanced a couple of hours by having it arrive in Clearfield about 9 o'clock instead of 11:15 as at present.

Such a move would be a great advantage to Clearfield business men, as it would give them both their eastern and western mail two hours earlier and thus give them a day's or at least a half day's advantage in their replies. In addition thereto the morning newspapers would arrive here just that much earlier, which would also be a decided or desired advantage or convenience.

The morning train from Philadelphia arrives in Tyrone at 6 o'clock, while the western main-line train gets to Tyrone at 7 o'clock a. m. This would allow the transfer of mail, passengers, etc., to the branch train and the start for Clearfield could be made ten or fifteen minutes later.

The matter will be put up to Supt. Johnson shortly and he will be strongly urged to make the change desired.

Salts Fine For Aching Kidneys

We eat too much meat, which clogs kidneys, then back hurts and bladder bothers you.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, si

all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive;

Simply Worn Out

How Many Women Are Like This?

Can anything be more wearying for women than the ceaseless round of household duties? Oh! the monotony of it all—work and drudge; no time to be sick; tired, ailing, yet cannot stop. There comes a time when something "snaps" and they find themselves "simply worn out," and to make matters worse, have contracted serious feminine disorder which almost always follows the constant overtaxing of a woman's strength.

Then they should remember that there is no remedy like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—the experience of these two women establishes that fact:

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—"After the birth of my last child I had such painful spells that would not entirely for my household work. I suffered for months and the doctor said that my trouble was organic and I would have to have an operation. That was an awful thing to me, with a young baby and four other children, so one day I thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it had helped me years before and I decided to try it. I took five bottles of Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and since then I have been a well woman, able to take care of my house and family without any trouble or day's pain. I am really and truly thankful to your medicine any time. I am forty-four years old and have not had a day's illness of any kind for three years."

"Love's Ladder"

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

"Hands up!" ordered Zeb Deane, village marshal of Plympton, and one of his own extended a gleaming weapon.

Amid the obscurity of the Prescott garden the person he confronted was not clearly distinguishable. He had failed at the mandate, but he mystified his dauntless challenger by indulging in a low, mischievous chuckle.

"No need, Zeb," he spoke softly. "It is only me, Morton Wells. A ladder, a seeming burglar on the roof of the sun parlor, and you naturally took me for a burglar. Well, I've been stealing nothing but—kisses."

"Huh!" ejaculated Zeb bewilderedly, but the young man had coolly taken his arm, led the protector of Plympton clear of the grounds and backed him to a tree. "You're a good friend of mine," professed Morton.

"Seeing as you got me my present job—rather," acquiesced the old watchman fervently.

"I know I can trust you with a secret. Pretty Eunice Prescott loves me and I love her. Our parents who look upon me as a ne'er-do-well refused me the house—and I have to see Eunice once in a while, and as the sun porch leads right off from her room, and my folding ladder is easy to carry along, we have circumvented gruff old papa. Clever, eh?"

"I declare!" exclaimed Zeb, as there was a click and a small contrivance in Morton's hand shot out a steel skeleton framework a dozen feet in length, and then drew it back into a compact mass he could place in his pocket. Made it yourself, too, eh?"

"That's about all I can do for—putting in mechanics," replied Morton rather ruefully. "Not much for anything else. That's why my attentions to Eunice have disgruntled the old folks. Now then, Zeb, keep your own counsel and don't take me for a crack-brain next time you see me around here."

Zeb looked fondly after Morton as he disappeared. Then he shook his head gravely. Headless, headstrong Morton Wells, a model as to habits and character, was looked upon as an impractical dreamer. He had "liked to fuss with tools" since he was an orphan, and this predilection had been present in his later years. For all that, the girls of the town adored him and the young men treasured him as a companion and friend.

It was three nights after the episode of the sun porch that old Zeb, huddled as he was passing the Prescott place, saw his custom several times between dusk and dawn.

"Hello!" he muttered—"some more mystery. I certainly heard a ground."

It echoed from the rear of the Prescott home and Zeb entered the grounds. As he neared a one-story wing of the house he made a discovery. Upon the ground lay a motionless form; outspread upon the grass was the ladder. Morton Wells had shown him the Monday previous.

Zeb glanced at the house. It was dark and silent. It did not take him long to figure out the situation. Morton had made one of his daring visits to his darling, and in descending to the ground had missed his footing, or the ladder had collapsed, and here he was, the evidence of the fact. Zeb was too good a friend to Morton to arouse the Prescott family, thus betraying his favorite's clandestine visits. He tried to arouse Morton, but the latter was unconscious. Zeb lifted him bodily and got him to the street. He rested him under a tree. In the course of a few minutes Morton was restored to sensibility. He whined with pain as he tried to use one arm.

"It's broken, Zeb," he told the watchman. "Get me home, will you? And say—afterward go and get that ladder. If it's found the Prescotts will guess what I've been up to. I'll be around in a day or two again and don't want to be shut out from seeing Eunice."

But Morton's prediction was without basis. For a week he was under the surgeon's care with orders to remain quiet, and with the injured member in a plaster cast for a fortnight longer.

His wealthy brother from the city, who had been somewhat distant with him for a year or two on account of his shifting ways, came down to see him. He whistled out of Zeb the full details of the accident. He examined the ladder with manifest interest. He, too, looked over several experiments in the way of invention in the workshop of his wild brother.

"He's a genius, young Morton is," declared the loyal Zeb. "There isn't a finer young man in Plympton, and I—somebody took hold of him and set him on his feet right he'd whine in the end."

"I think I see my way to encouraging him to a start," replied Arnold Wells, a speculative look in his eye. "My business is the manufacture of hardware novelties, and that ladder and one or two other little inventions of Morton's come right in our line."

He told Morton this, too, gave him some brotherly advice, a pretentious check for his inventions, offered fair compensation for a year's service in his business establishment, and Morton scolded down into a sensible business man.

As a prosperous and accepted business man to the parents of Eunice they rather enjoyed the recital of the ladder episode the day of the wedding.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Snatching of longevity of people and healthfulness of a community, we do not believe that there is another town in Western Pennsylvania that can equal in these two conditions little Curwensville. In enumerating the population from memory yesterday, the writer counted 35 males and 37 females whose ages range from 76 to 95 years, all of whom are in reasonably good health and bid fair to round out many more years yet before their call comes. Biblical lore teaches us that "the old must die and the young may yet," yet comparing the death rate of last year we find that there were more deaths among the young and middle aged than there were in the ranks of those whose ages aggregated 75 years and upwards. In counting for age, as above stated, the writer evidently missed a number of people who should have been included in this paragraph. Two deaths have already occurred during this month, both ladies, whose ages were 74 and 91 respectively. This tabulation leads us to the belief that people who reside in country towns live to a greater age than those who reside in large towns and cities, and as an old philosopher puts it, "the closer people live to nature, the longer the lease of life," and, as the inhabitants of this section have a chance to do this, and a great many of them do, partially explains why so many in this community have passed the three score and ten mark.

The little flurry of trouble that occurred between the school board and one of the teachers last week over a payment of monthly wages, has been amicably settled and the teacher has returned to her duties. The matter should have been settled without so much notoriety being attached to it. The explanatory article of the Herald last week, may have had a tendency to cause the board to see things in a different light and hasten them to a sense of duty in righting the matter, before it had gained too much publicity. Be that as it may, "all is well that ends well," and as far as the wage question is concerned all parties are satisfied, for the time being at least. Curwensville citizens have always prided themselves in the fact that the town had the reputation of having the best public schools to be found in this section of the county, but for the past two or three years, there seems to have been more or less fuss and contention among pupils and instructors than ever before. This item is not intended to speak disparagingly of any particular teacher or pupil, but it does want to impress upon the minds of the persons composing the school board that it is their public duty to use every endeavor to bring the Curwensville schools up to the high standard that it enjoyed more than half a dozen years ago.

The Romans suffered, who built such wonderful roads and carried a weight of armor and baggage, lived on coarse brown bread and sour wine. They were temperate in diet and regular and constant in exercise. The Spanish peasant works every day and dances half the night, yet eats only black bread, onion and water lemon.

The Man Nobody Knew

is a serial of a different kind. It follows our policy to present the best in current fiction, each story dealing with a phase of life unlike the others. Authors with a talent for presenting in a wholesome, entertaining way unusual situations and odd, original plots have been selected. Such an author, standing well near the top among contemporaries, is

Holworthy Hall

Suppose among your casual acquaintances were a man wearing a different face—not a disguise—speaking a different voice, acting and living a changed personality, whom you discover to be actually someone you formerly had known intimately. Would you not be amazed and mystified? Such is the situation in "The Man Nobody Knew," excepting that the reader holds the secret. You see him in his former identity wherein he was a failure, with record not too savory. You follow him in his changed character going among the same people with all his old proclivities and temptations, yet patently redeeming the past, making good. His experiences and adventures are remarkable and he has the oddest, most difficult problem ever placed before a man. It especially concerns the girl who had refused him in his former life.

FAIRY TALEBy Mary Graham

LITTLE PITCHERS.

"Tomorrow," said a mother to her
little girl, whose name was Janet, "we
all wish each other a happy
New Year. To-
morrow a quite
new year begins.
For tomorrow is
the first of January."

"Does Up the Package."

"I would like to
have a wish grant-
ed," said Janet,
"not just being
wished a happy
New Year, but a
wish. All of my own."

Janet was in
bed, and she was
having this talk
with her mother,
who was sitting
on the edge of
the bed having a little chat before it
was time to go to sleep.

"What do you wish?" asked Janet's
mother.

But Janet did not hear her mother,
for Janet had fallen asleep.

She was dreaming of the New Year
all dressed up in fine, fresh clothes,
when suddenly a little creature ap-
peared before her.

"Who are you?" Janet asked.

"I," said the little creature, "am a
fairy. Do you see my wings? And
do you see the wand I have? I'm a special fairy. I'm the Wishing Fairy.
We were told by the Fairy Wondrous
Secrets that you had a wish you especially wanted granted you."

"You know the Fairy Wondrous Secrets? She is who does up the
packages of beautiful secrets which
are sent by the Dreamland King and
his messengers right into the mind
of children. There is a direct route
from Fairyland to Childhood Land,
you know."

"I didn't know," Janet said, "but I'm
glad to hear it."

"Well," the Wishing Fairy continued, "I want to tell you about the Fairy Wondrous Secrets and what she
said to me. She was busy doing up
these packages, and so were all her
helpers, but she talked while she
worked."

"Wishing Fairy," she said, "there is
a little girl named Janet who wants
a wish granted. The thing for you
to do is to ask her what it is. Then
the Dreamland King will help you.
Her mother and her daddy must know
her wish, too, but they must hear it
from the Dreamland King—not from
her."

"Go to her, Wishing Fairy, and
you will know what is her wish."

"So I have come to you to ask your
wish."

"I was going to tell it to my mother," Janet said, "only a little while
ago, but somehow I didn't, and before
I knew it I saw you."

"Yes," the Wishing Fairy said, "I
have come to ask you your wish."

"You may think it silly," Janet said.
"Graciously, no," said the Wishing Fairy. "I am too used to hearing
strange wishes."

"The Wishing Fairy smiled sweetly.
"Do tell me your wish. Is it a happy
New Year that you are wishing for?"

"Of course I wish that, too, I suppose. If that's not too much," Janet
said.

"Not too much at all," the Wishing Fairy said.

"Then," said Janet, "I will tell you
my special wish, too. It really is made up of several little wishes all in
one. I hope I'm not wishing for too
much."

"Pray tell me," the fairy urged.

"Then I wish," said Janet, "that my
mother and daddy would know that it
hurts me dread-
fully when they
say that little
brothers have big
ears. I feel so
much in the way
then. And when
folks come to visit
and say that children should be
seen and not
heard, and I used
to know you when
you were so high.
Oh, dear, I wish
they wouldn't say
such things."

"I'll tell you
what I'll do," the Wishing Fairy
said. "I will ask
the Dreamland King to tell your mother and daddy that it hurts you to be
told that. And I will get the Dream-
land King to tell as many people as
he can about the other speeches. He
can't tell all, but he will do a great
great deal. And if I grant your wishes,
will you do something for me?"

Janet nodded.

"I wish you to ask the grown-ups
not to say things that hurt you and
other children, and I ask you and other
children never to hurt older people by
making them feel old or in the way."

And Janet promised.

Wise to Fish Story.

"Now, boys," said the Sunday school
teacher to the juvenile class, "I'll
tell you about Jonah and the whale."

"But," exclaimed a bright little
five-year-old visitor, "Ain't these kids
wise to that fish story yet?"

A Joyous
Helper

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

When Laurence Colby's spinster
aunt announced to him that she had
made up her mind to apportion to him
the part of her estate she had intend-
ed to leave him by will, he whistled
volubly in his natural impetuous style.

"You have shown yourself to be a
sincere and contented young man, and
I shan't keep you waiting for dead
man's shoes," she observed definitely.

"I certainly never made any calcu-
lations on yours," declared Laurence.
"What's more, I'm perfectly satisfied
and happy with my present lot. I'm earning a living, everybody seems to
like me, I like everybody."

"Well, my lawyer will tell you what I have done for you, and I am glad I
have done it."

"The first thing Laurence thought of
after he found himself independent
and rich was to take a vacation. The first person he planned on visiting was Dudley Vernon.

"I've a pretty warm spot in my heart
for dear old Dad," he told himself. "He
helped me to get through college; he
saved my life once."

So Laurence went down to Westport
and became a guest at the house of Dudley's widowed sister, with whom
Dudley lived.

A few days after he had arrived at Westport, Laurence got Mrs. Alston
alone and sat down for a confidential
chat.

"I am worried nearly to death about
Dudley," he said, "he is so changed.
Won't you relieve my mind and put me
in the way of helping him?"

"Dudley has been that way since he
returned from a month's stay at Adrian," said Mrs. Alston. "I will tell
you all I know. It doesn't come from
him, but from an accidental discovery
I made. Dudley seems to have fallen
in love with a young lady during his
vacation. I do not know her name,
only that she lives at Adrian. In his
waste basket a few days since I found
a photograph torn in two. Here are
the fragments."

"I say," ejaculated Laurence, scan-
ning the joined pieces of cardboard.
"If I had a picture like that I'd wear
it over my heart!"

"I also found parts of a letter apparently from the father of the young
lady. It informed Dudley that he
could not look upon their engagement
with favor, as he had learned con-
fidentially that Dudley's business was
at the point of failure."

"Is that true?" inquired Laurence.

"I fear that it is. His lawyer, Mr.
Ames, tells me so."

Laurence visited the lawyer to find
that ten thousand dollars would place
his friend beyond the power of business disappointment. He went to Adrian seeking for a young lady whose
name even he did not know. Her lovely
face, however, was vividly impressed
upon his mind.

Fortune favored Laurence's plans.
He was traversing a residence street
of Adrian when he came upon a large
walker lying on the pavement. Laurence
picked it up to find it filled with
papers and money. Turning a corner
he nearly collided with a burly figure, a flushed, excited girl.

"Found at last," he breathed with
intense satisfaction as he recognized
her, and then observing that she was
scanning walk and street with eager
eyes he spoke aloud: "Excuse me,
miss, but have you lost something?"

"Yes, but yes—a wallet containing
some very valuable papers I was taking to my father's office from the
house."

"Is that it?" questioned Laurence,
and Miss Annette Dutton took the wal-
let tendered with a joyous cry.

The incident led to their becoming
acquainted more fully, and within a
week Laurence was an accepted visitor at the Dutton home. Through
various investigation he learned that Annette knew Dudley Vernon, but she
did not seem to be intensely interested
when he was mentioned. Persistently,
however, Laurence brought up the
name of his friend on every possible
occasion, particularly before the parents of Annette. He landed Dudley, he
told of recent business troubles now
all adjusted, and Dudley on the way
to become a millionaire. Then one
day there came a vast surprise when
Annette propounded the query:

"Mr. Colby, why is it that you are always speaking of Mr. Vernon? I told
my friend, Virginia Bland, about it,
and she cannot understand your deep
interest in her fiancé."

"In her what?" cried Laurence,
amazement, hope, mystery, delight
struggling for mastery in his heart.

"Her fiancé. They were to marry,
but her parents have objected and Virginia is very unhappy."

Not very long, however—for, quickly
discerning the blunder he had made,
Laurence set about righting the situation. He learned that the photograph
must have been one given to Dudley
by Miss Bland. He now enlightened
Mr. Bland, telling him how he had swept Dudley financially. Annette
heard of this. By that time she and Laurence had discovered their mutual
love.

"Oh, you dear, true fellow!" she
cried. "To give up all your money for
the sake of a friend!"

"Oh, no, all, Annette, dear," correct-
ed Laurence. "There is still a liberal
income from investments, and a beautiful home to be graced by the beloved bride in Christendom."

"At least the happiest!" declared
be-dazzled Annette.

He is a full officer of the law and makes every body obey the law that with the aid of his attorney, District Attorney Arnold, is going to attempt in the Clearfield county courts to make the County Commissioners obey the law of March 2nd 1899, under the law the Constables of Pennsylvania are made officers to collect and receive.

ROADS IMPASSABLE

That Clearfield business men appreciate the fact that impassable roads deter folks from trading in Clearfield was borne out when several carloads of live-wire merchants started out to break the roads between here and Philipsburg.

The recent snows have filled the roads bank full of tightly packed "beautiful" until getting thru is a matter of luck more than anything else.

This is a step forward in the right direction for the good of this city and these men deserve the thanks of every business man in the city.

Most of the cars got thru but there was one that started that did not get very far. However as Rudyard Kipling would say that's a story for grown ups.

Good evening We are still here

Looks as though the treaty were going to take the death route too

Mr. Public Spirited Stockholder of the Park Association: Be sure to remember your meeting next Monday.

Starting as the Sims revelations are, it is not apparent that any great amount of public opinion is going to back up the admiral in his charges. If mistakes of administration were made, and undoubtedly many were made, it is not the funeral of Mr. Sims and his dumping of the whole wash into the fine laundry does not tend to clean Mr. Sims' skirt

The statement to Sims before he departed for Europe, strong as it sounds was undoubtedly good advice if taken literally and that was no doubt the intention. The warning not to let Britain pull the wool over his eyes, we take, was a mere figure of speech and was to be applied to any of the allied nations. We were in the war, roughly speaking, to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for all and not for any one nation in preference to any other.

Some two or three months ago Probation Officer John A. Stock appealed to The Progress in the interest of a little three years old boy who had been cast on the rocks of domestic difficulties and faced going through life with its attendant difficulties. The mother was perfectly aware that her struggle to give the little chap all that was his due in life would not be successful and reluctantly heeded the advice of older and wiser heads that she entrust the raising of the little fellow to someone better equipped in this world's goods. A little want advertisement was inserted in The Progress and there were many requests from homes which needed only the company of a little child to make life complete. Finally from the list Mr. Stock selected the home for the boy. Today he is being taken care of in fine shape and the mother may be happy in the thought that her loved one is in kind and loving hands and will grow to full manhood to respect and revere her. It may be a cold old world but there are some warm places in it after all

Up until today those responsible for the disbarment of the Socialist members of the New York state assembly have not produced reasons for their action which will win the approval of public opinion or stand the test under the constitution of the United States. Unless the prosecutors in the case have something up their sleeve which they have not yet made public it will appear that the proceedings are a deliberate attempt at high handed usurpation of authority and an illegal restraint of the right of peoples under the constitution to choose their own legislators. We do not subscribe to a single tenet of the Socialist doctrine but the attempted persecution of members of that creed will serve only one purpose—and that a bad one—an increasing feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction

Temporizing with a lawless element or an anarchistically inclined individual is not desired and must not be tolerated. Fear of further unrest must not be the motive or purpose of any letup in the thorough cleansing of our populace as now being carried out by the Department of Justice. There is, however, a vast difference between the deportation of an alien and the disbarment of a citizen from the legislative halls of government and its resultant disqualification of the voters who cast their ballot for those disbarred

There is no parallel between the New York state case and the Berger case. Berger had already been found guilty by the court of law and the court of public opinion.

Patriotism And Saving

During the War everyone saved as a patriotic duty. The savings of the people helped materially in winning the War.

In time of Peace it is just as much a patriotic duty to save. The Business of the Nation must depend on the savings of the people for capital

Save your money and put it in the bank where it will furnish capital and also earn interest for you.

Have Pains?
Aches and pains seem to be the lot of the ordinary mortal. However, these should be taken simply as nature's warning signals that some part of the human machine is out of order. It is a mistake to resign one's self to physical torture when the cause can be removed.
Foley Kidney Pills
tone up weak, inactive, sluggish kidneys and help rid the blood of poisons, waste matter that causes aches and pains in arms and legs, backache, rheumatic pains, sore muscles, stiff or swollen joints.
Isaac B. Jernigan, Ashbury Park N. J. writes: "My back caused me a great deal of trouble for some time. I experienced sharp, shooting pains which were due to the condition of my kidneys. One bottle of Foley Kidney Pills completely relieved me. The pain is now gone. I recommend Foley Kidney Pills to my friends."

George Washington shaved himself

ON occasion. One of these occasions was when his faithful servant allowed his hand to slip—whereupon the General arose in his wrath and finished the job himself; for the Father of our Country was very properly fond of a good, clean shave.

And in his simple shaving kit may still be seen his equally simple razors. While their model is many hundred years old, they have never been bettered in left, or shearing width, or right shaving angle on the face.

At such times when his old servant failed him, Washington would have appreciated the guarded, two edged blade of the Durham-Duplex because he would have found it nothing more than his own well-loved model made safe.

DURHAM-DUPLEX A Real Razor—made Safe

Exactly the same shape and balance in the hand that uncounted generations of shavers have brought to perfection—with these extra advantages: (1) a guarded blade that can't cut your face. (2) a double-edged blade for economy's sake. (3) a detachable blade for the luxury of a fresh edge at a moment's notice.

(4) a strappable blade, so that you don't have to throw good steel away. And it's the longest, strongest, keenest, best-tempered blade on earth. Seven million shavers have found that the Durham-Duplex gives them more shaving mileage than any other safety razor. Get your Durham-Duplex today.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

The lecture in the opera house Monday evening, being the third entertainment given under the auspices of the High School, was reasonably well attended, and the subject of the lecturer, "The Making of Man," was one of much interest and instruction. The young people of today do not see much to learn from a good lecture as their parents did in days of yore. If the entertainment had been of the frivolous nature, the large auditorium would have been crowded from pillar to post with young folks. The middle-aged who were present and were able to follow the speaker closely found many things in his theme to interest them and furnish solid food for after-thought for days to come.

The funeral of Mrs. Rebecca Gates was held from her late home yesterday afternoon. A large concourse of friends gathered at the house to take the last farewell of the one they loved while on earth. Her remains were laid at rest in the family plot close to the side of her husband.

There is one industry that Curwensville is badly in need of or perhaps worse than any other just at present, and that is an up-to-date steam laundry. One that will do all kinds of washing and ironing, and not confine its work to fancy shirts and collars. Curwensville has never had a good laundryman since Alfred Lavender removed from town to Renova. There has been a half dozen slovenly Chinamen here since that time, but their work was so rotten that patrons would not stand for it, and they were forced to get out and go elsewhere to ply their trade. The people would patronize a good laundry willingly.

Do not forget that, on Thursday evening the second meeting of that new organization, which promises so much for the town's welfare, will be held in the High School building, where it will be given a name. Curwensville citizens should reach a point to get to this meeting and learn all about the advantages it will be for them to attach their names to its constitution and become members. A good many years ago an old deacon in the Methodist church needed the writer one bright Sunday morning, and said to him: "Come, go along to church; it will not hurt you if it does not do you any good." That is why we urge upon the people of Curwensville to attend the meeting, and get in out of the wet, and if the meeting does not hurt you it will do you some good eventually.

CHARITABLE ACT APPRECIATED

The Ladies' Aid Society in charge of the Children's Home have in their hands this day, making ends meet for the best of little folks being maintained at this splendid institution.

The Sewing Committee, which meets one day a week at the home for the purpose of sewing and mending for the little people have been handicapped for some time by lack of a sewing machine. Not having available funds, sufficient to purchase a machine the committee went to W. P. Shneider, the Second Street merchant, to secure the loan of a machine to help them with their excess of work.

When the situation was explained to Mr. Shneider that gentleman very promptly and very generously loaned a brand new $75 machine on his delivery truck and before the committee could get back to their sewing had the same installed in the sewing room at the home.

The Progress happened to stumble onto the facts in the case and takes pleasure in mentioning this generous action despite the fact that Mr. Shneider expressly forbids any mention of his donation.

A PRETTY DOUBLE CHURCH WEDDING

A pretty double wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Gallitzin on Wednesday morning, January 14th, when Miss Genevieve Talney, daughter of Mrs. Mary Talney, of that place, became the bride of Frank Garabedian, of Phillipsburg, and Miss Regina Miller, also of Gallitzin, the bride of Charles Wise, of Crescon. The double ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father J. J. Deary, rector of the church.

Following an Eastern honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Garabedian will reside in Phillipsburg and Mr. and Mrs. Wise in Crescon. Mr. Garabedian is the very capable interior decorator at Adelman & Rattowsky's "Big Store", and one of Phillipsburg's most genial and popular young men. His charming young bride may be assured of a hearty welcome to our city, and we voice the sentiment of the community when we speak for the happy couple a future of great happiness and prosperity.

Mr. Garabedian was formerly employed at Shipp's in Clearfield and is well known here.

A way to do the Family Washing in 15 Minutes

Wouldn't you esteem it a blessing if you could have the toil and muss of the family washing all over within ten or fifteen minutes?

A dream? Not at all—for it can be done. Here is the recipe.

First ten minutes—Gather up the family washing and make a list of it.

Next four minutes—Wrap securely into a bundle.

Last minute—Telephone our Laundry.

Total time expenditure—Fifteen minutes.

Time saved—Ten to fifteen hours.

When our driver calls, he also gathers up the untidiness and drudgery of washday—and leaves for you, leisure for more womanly activities.

Meanwhile your washing is at our laundry being cleansed with thoroughness and a consummate care that no laundress can excel. There is no boiling or rubbing to fray fabrics and wear out clothes. We achieve cleanliness by gentle sousing and rinsing in clear, soft water and pure white suds. Your clothes are daintily finished, too, and returned to you sweet and spotless.

Reduce your washday to fifteen minutes by sending your family washing to us. A telephone call will bring our driver.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside, no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head, no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy and stomach pain, you must bathe in the inside like you bathe outside. This is easily most important, because the skin pores do not absorb poisons into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify, and loosen the entire alimentary tract before eating more food.

Get a quarter pound of Limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless. Drink limestone hot water every morning to rid your system of those vile poisons and toxins also to prevent their formation.

The number of people this county is supporting in asylums and other refuges is appalling and the cost to the county is beyond the knowledge of a great many citizens. Our duty to these unfortunate is plain and no amount of expense necessary to their comfort and well being should be spared. In this issue we set forth a great deal of information on this matter. Sooner or later Clearfield County will face the necessity of providing for these people within our borders. Whether that time is at hand is a matter of uncertainty but the problem warrants the serious consideration of county officials.

Dabbling in politics for gain or preferment is mighty poor business for anybody or any organization, particularly a newspaper, which if it is to command and hold the respect of its readers, must be above the domination of political pirates. Many a newspaper has been cast on the shoals of financial ruin through its hope to the ashcart of a political organization. A newspaper is made by its subscribers and the interest of the newspaper must be for the best interests of its subscribers. May we always remember that the true meaning of politics is the science of government and not the art of public office manipulation. Whenever politicians divert their attention from the science of government and indulge in greedy and selfish practices they lay themselves open to comment and criticism.

CHANGE OF TRAIN TIME URGED

Local business men are behind a movement soon to be launched looking to the placing of another train on the Tyrone and Clearfield branch of the Pennsylvania or at least having the morning train advanced a couple of hours by having it arrive in Clearfield about 9 o'clock instead of 11:15 as at present.

Such a move would be a great advantage to Clearfield business men, as it would give them both their eastern and western mail two hours earlier and thus give them a day's or at least a half day's advantage in their replies. In addition thereto the morning newspapers would arrive here just that much earlier, which would also be a decided or desired advantage or convenience.

The morning train from Philadelphia arrives in Tyrone at 6 o'clock, while the western main-line train gets to Tyrone at 7 o'clock a. m. This would allow the transfer of mail, passengers, etc., to the branch train and the start for Clearfield could be made ten or fifteen minutes later.

The matter will be put up to Supt. Johnson shortly and he will be strongly urged to make the change desired.

"Widow's Widdow."
Widow's widdow are great mounds, some 200 feet long and 250 feet wide, found in Denmark, England, Scotland, France and in parts of Europe, North and South America, and Australia. They are supposed to be the refuse of prehistoric periods, and are composed chiefly of oyster, periwinkle, snail and mussel shells. In them are found implements of wood, stone, bones of animals and clinders.

Utilizing Paper.
Although there is a great shortage of paper, it is unlikely that many of us have carried economy to the extent indicated in a letter received by a school teacher the other day. "Dear Sir," it ran, "Please excuse Tom being late, but our gas leaks, so we couldn't get any breakfast. Please send a note to put it right. P. S.—Please let him take this note on to the plumber."

"Boaker Time" is Cheerful.

The term a "boaker time," which the Australians use to describe a cheerful leave, comes home to its birthplace, little altered, "Boaky." With a similar meaning was an English colloquialism in the eighteenth century. And "boaky" is still current slang with us, but implying too generous use of the wine cup. There is one phrase in the book of slang which is decidedly pleasing, "Australian grip." It stands for that best of greetings, the honest, hearty hand shake.—London Chronicle.

Garden of Eden in Mexico?

A prehistoric race that lived in Mexico centuries before Cortez ever arrived there to crush the power of the Aztec kingdom, was a civilized people who were flooded out of existence by a deluge that swept the valley of Mexico, as ruins picked up near the capital city prove, and some writers assert that Mexico was the site of the beginning of man and that it was in this valley that Noah set forth for his 40-day tour of the flooded world.

Money Not Main Object.

"All healthily minded people like making money—ought to like it and enjoy the sensation of winning it; but the main object of their life is not money. A good soldier, for instance, usually wishes to do his fighting well. He is glad of his pay—very properly so, and justly grumbles when you keep him ten years without it—still, his main notion of life is to win battles, not to be paid for winning them."—John Ruskin.

Salts Fine For Aching Kidneys

We eat too much meat, which clogs kidneys, then back hurts and bladder bothers you.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, etc.

all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive.

The Linen Sheet. It was in the reign of King John that linen sheets for beds began to be used. The sheriff of Southampton, on his receiving the honor of knighthood, was ordered to deliver to the king a couch, a bed and a gill of wine.

Simply Worn Out

How Many Women Are Like This?

Can anything be more wearying for women than the ceaseless round of household duties? Oh! the monotony of it all—work and drudge; no time to be sick, tired, ailing, yet cannot stop. There comes a time when something "snaps" and they find themselves "simply worn out," and to make matters worse, have contracted serious feminine disorder which almost always follows the constant overtaxing of a woman's strength.

Then they should remember that there is no remedy like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—the experience of these two women establishes that fact:

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—"After the birth of my last child I had such painful spells that would not entirely for my household work. I suffered for months and the doctor said that my trouble was organic and I would have to have an operation. That was an awful thing to me, with a young baby and four other children, so one day I thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it had helped me years before and I decided to try it. I took five bottles of Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and since then I have been a well woman, able to take care of my house and family without any trouble or a day's pain. I am really and truly thankful to your medicine any time. I am forty-four years old and have not had a day's illness of any kind for three years."

"Love's Ladder"

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

"Hands up!" ordered Zeb Deane, village marshal of Plympton, and one of his own extended a gleaming weapon.

Amid the obscurity of the Trescott garden the person he confronted was not clearly distinguishable. He had failed at the mandate, but he mystified his dauntless challenger by indulging in a low, mirthful chuckle.

"No need, Zeb," he spoke mildly. "It is only me, Morton Wells. A ladder, a seeming burglar on the roof of the sun parlor, and you naturally took me for a burglar. Well, I've been stealing nothing but—kisses."

"Huh!" ejaculated Zeb bewilderedly, but the young man had coolly taken his arm, led the protector of Plympton clear of the grounds and backed him to a tree. "You're a good friend of mine," professed Morton.

"Seeing as you got me my present job—rather," acquiesced the old watchman fervently.

"I know I can trust you with a secret. Pretty Eunice Trescott loves me and I love her. Our parents who look upon me as a ne'er-do-well refused me the house—and I have to see Eunice once in a while, and as the sun porch leads right off from her room, and my folding ladder is easy to carry along, we have circumvented gruff old papa. Clever, eh?"

"I declare!" exclaimed Zeb, as there was a click and a small contrivance in Morton's hand shot out a steel skeleton framework a dozen feet in length, and then drew it back into a compact mass he could place in his pocket. Made it yourself, too, eh?"

"That's about all I can good for—putting in mechanics," replied Morton rather ruefully. "Not much for anything else. That's why my attentions to Eunice have disgruntled the old folks. Now then, Zeb, keep your own counsel and don't take me for a crackman next time you see me around here."

Zeb looked fondly after Morton as he disappeared. Then he shook his head gravely. Headstrong Morton Wells, a model as to habits and character, was looked upon as an impractical dreamer. He had "liked to fuss with tools" since he was an urchin, and this predilection had been present in his later years. For all that, the girls of the town adored him and the young men treasured him as a companion and friend.

It was three nights after the episode of the sun porch that old Zeb, huddled as he was passing the Trescott place, saw his custom several times between dusk and dawn.

"Hello!" he muttered—"some more mystery. I certainly heard a groan."

It echoed from the rear of the Trescott home and Zeb entered the grounds. As he neared a one-story wing of the house he made a discovery. Upon the ground lay a motionless form; outspread upon the grass was the ladder. Morton Wells had shown him the Monday previous.

Zeb glanced at the house. It was dark and silent. It did not take him long to figure out the situation. Morton had made one of his daring visits to his darling, and in descending to the ground had missed his footing, or the ladder had collapsed, and here he was, the evidence of the fact. Zeb was too good a friend to Morton to arouse the Trescott family, thus betraying his favorite's clandestine visits. He tried to arouse Morton, but the latter was unconscious. Zeb lifted him bodily and got him to the street. He rested him under a tree. In the course of a few minutes Morton was restored to sensibility. He winced with pain as he tried to use one arm.

"It's broken, Zeb," he told the watchman. "Get me home, will you? And say—afterward go and get that ladder. If it's found the Trescotts will guess what I've been up to. I'll be around in a day or two again and don't want to be shut out from seeing Eunice."

But Morton's prediction was without basis. For a week he was under the surgeon's care with orders to remain quiet, and with the injured member in a plaster cast for a fortnight longer. His wealthy brother from the city, who had been somewhat distant with him for a year or two on account of his shifting ways, came down to see him. He whizzed out of Zeb the full details of the accident. He examined the ladder with manifest interest. He, too, looked over several experiments in the way of invention in the workroom of his wealthy brother.

"He's a genius, young Morton is," declared the loyal Zeb. "There isn't a finer young man in Plympton, and I someone look hold of him and set him on his feet right he'd win in the end."

"I think I see my way to encouraging him to a start," replied Arnold Wells, a speculative look in his eye. "My business is the manufacture of hardware novelties, and that ladder and one or two other little inventions of Morton's come right in our line."

He told Morton this, too, gave him some brotherly advice, a pretentious check for his inventions, offered fair compensation for a year's service in his business establishment, and Morton scolded down into a sensible business man.

As a prosperous and accepted business man to the parents of Eunice they rather enjoyed the recital of the ladder episode the day of the wedding.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Snatching of longevity of people and healthfulness of a community, we do not believe that there is another town in Western Pennsylvania that can equal in these two conditions little Curwensville. In enumerating the population from memory yesterday, the writer counted 35 males and 37 females whose ages range from 76 to 95 years, all of whom are in reasonably good health and bid fair to round out many more years yet before their call comes. Biblical lore teaches us that "the old must die and the young may," yet comparing the death rate of last year we find that there were more deaths among the young and middle aged than there were in the ranks of those whose ages aggregated 75 years and upwards. In counting for age, as above stated, the writer evidently missed a number of people who should have been included in this paragraph. Two deaths have already occurred during this month, both ladies, whose ages were 74 and 91 respectively. This tabulation leads us to the belief that people who reside in country towns live to a greater age than those who reside in large towns and cities, and as an old philosopher puts it, "the closer people live to nature, the longer the lease of life," and, as the inhabitants of this section have a chance to do this, and a great many of them do, partially explains why so many in this community have passed the three score and ten mark.

The little flurry of trouble that occurred between the school board and one of the teachers last week over a payment of monthly wages, has been amicably settled and the teacher has returned to her duties. The matter should have been settled without so much notoriety being attached to it. The explanatory article of the Herald last week, may have had a tendency to cause the board to see things in a different light and hasten them to a sense of duty in righting the matter, before it had gained too much publicity. Be that as it may, "all is well that ends well," and as far as the wage question is concerned all parties are satisfied, for the time being at least. Curwensville citizens have always prided themselves in the fact that the town had the reputation of having the best public schools to be found in this section of the county, but for the past two or three years, there seems to have been more or less fuss and contention among pupils and instructors than ever before. This item is not intended to speak disparagingly of any particular teacher or pupil, but it does want to impress upon the minds of the persons composing the school board that it is their public duty to use every endeavor to bring the Curwensville schools up to the high standard that it enjoyed more than half a dozen years ago.

is a serial of a different kind. It follows our policy to present the best in current fiction, each story dealing with a phase of life unlike the others. Such an author, standing well near the top among contemporaries, is

Suppose among your casual acquaintances were a man wearing a different face—not a disguise—speaking a different voice, acting and living a changed personality, whom you discover to be actually someone you formerly had known intimately. Would you not be amazed and mystified? Such is the situation in "The Man Nobody Knew," excepting that the reader holds the secret. You see him in his former identity wherein he was a failure, with record not too savory. You follow him in his changed character going among the same people with all his old proclivities and temptations, yet patently redeeming the past, making good. His experiences and adventures are remarkable, and he has the oddest, most difficult problem ever placed before a man. It especially concerns the girl who had refused him in his former life.

DADDY'S EVENING
FAIRY TALE

LITTLE PITCHERS.

"Tomorrow," said a mother to her
little girl, whose name was Janet, "we
all wish each other a happy
New Year. To-
morrow a quite
new year begins.
For tomorrow is
the first of Janu-
ary."

"I would like to
have a wish grant-
ed," said Janet,
"not just being
wished a happy
New Year, but a
wish. All of my
own."

Janet was in
bed, and she was
having this talk
with her mother,
who was sitting
on the edge of
the bed having a little chat before it
was time to go to sleep.

"What do you wish?" asked Janet's
mother.

But Janet did not hear her mother,
for Janet had fallen asleep.

She was dreaming of the New Year
all dressed up in fine, fresh clothes,
when suddenly a little creature ap-
peared before her.

"Who are you?" Janet asked.

"I," said the little creature, "am a
fairy. Do you see my wings? And
do you see the wand I have? I'm a
special fairy. I'm the Wishing Fairy.

We were told by the Fairy Wondrous
Secrets that you had a wish you espe-
cially wanted granted you."

"You know the Fairy Wondrous Secrets? She is who does up the
packages of beautiful secrets which
are sent by the Dreamland King and
his messengers right into the mind
of children. There is a direct route
from Fairyland to Childhood Land,
you know."

"I didn't know," Janet said, "but I'm
glad to hear it."

"Well," the Wishing Fairy continued, "I want to tell you about the Fairy Wondrous Secrets and what she
said to me. She was busy doing up
these packages, and so were all her
helpers, but she talked while she
worked."

"Wishing Fairy," she said, "there is
a little girl named Janet who wants
a wish granted. The thing for you
to do is to ask her what it is. Then
the Dreamland King will help you.
Her mother and her daddy must know
her wish, too, but they must hear it
from the Dreamland King—not from
her."

"Go to her, Wishing Fairy, and
you will know what is her wish."

"So I have come to you to ask your
wish."

"I was going to tell it to my mother," Janet said, "only a little while
ago, but somehow I didn't, and before
I knew it I saw you."

"Yes," the Wishing Fairy said, "I
have come to ask you your wish."

"You may think it silly," Janet said.
"Graciously, no," said the Wishing Fairy. "I am too used to hearing
strange wishes."

"The Wishing Fairy smiled sweetly.
"Do tell me your wish. Is it a happy
New Year that you are wishing for?"

"Of course I wish that, too, I sup-
pose. If that's not too much," Janet
said.

"Not too much at all," the Wishing Fairy said.

"Then," said Janet, "I will tell you
my special wish, too. It really is
made up of several little wishes all in
one. I hope I'm not wishing for too
much."

"Pray tell me," the fairy urged.

"Then I wish," said Janet, "that my
mother and daddy would know that it
hurts me dread-
fully when they
say that little
brothers have big
ears. I feel so
much in the way
then. And when
folks come to visit
and say that children should be
seen and not
heard, and I used
to know you when
you were so high.
Oh, dear, I wish
they wouldn't say
such things."

"I'll tell you
what I'll do," the Wishing Fairy
said. "I will ask
the Dreamland King to tell your mother and daddy that it hurts you to be
told that. And I will get the Dream-
land King to tell as many people as
he can about the other speeches. He
can't tell all, but he will do a great
great deal. And if I grant your wishes,
will you do something for me?"

Janet nodded.

"I wish you to ask the grown-ups
not to say things that hurt you and
other children, and I ask you and other
children never to hurt older people by
making them feel old or in the way."

And Janet promised.

Wise to Fish Story.

"Now, boys," said the Sunday school
teacher to the juvenile class, "I'll
tell you about Jonah and the whale."

"But," exclaimed a bright little
five-year-old visitor, "Ain't these kids
wise to that fish story yet?"

A Joyous
Helper

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

When Laurence Colby's spinster
aunt announced to him that she had
made up her mind to apportion to him
the part of her estate she had intend-
ed to leave him by will, he whistled
volubly in his natural impetuous style.

"You have shown yourself to be a
sincere and contented young man, and
I shan't keep you waiting for dead
man's shoes," she observed definitely.

"I certainly never made any calcu-
lations on yours," declared Laurence.

"What's more, I'm perfectly satisfied
and happy with my present lot. I'm
earning a living, everybody seems to
like me, I like everybody."

"Well, my lawyer will tell you what I have done for you, and I am glad I
have done it."

"The first thing Laurence thought of
after he found himself independent
and rich was to take a vacation. The
first person he planned on visiting was Dudley Vernon.

"I've a pretty warm spot in my heart
for dear old Dad," he told himself. "He
helped me to get through college; he
saved my life once."

So Laurence went down to Westport
and became a guest at the house of Dudley's widowed sister, with whom
Dudley lived.

A few days after he had arrived at Westport, Laurence got Mrs. Alston
alone and sat down for a confidential
chat.

"I am worried nearly to death about
Dudley," he said, "he is so changed.
Won't you relieve my mind and put me
in the way of helping him?"

"Dudley has been that way since he
returned from a month's stay at Adrian," said Mrs. Alston. "I will tell
you all I know. It doesn't come from
him, but from an accidental discovery
I made. Dudley seems to have fallen
in love with a young lady during his
vacation. I do not know her name,
only that she lives at Adrian. In his
waste basket a few days since I found
a photograph torn in two. Here are
the fragments."

"I say," ejaculated Laurence, scan-
ning the joined pieces of cardboard.
"If I had a picture like that I'd wear
it over my heart!"

"I also found parts of a letter ap-
parently from the father of the young
lady. It informed Dudley that he
could not look upon their engagement
with favor, as he had learned con-
fidentially that Dudley's business was
at the point of failure."

"Is that true?" inquired Laurence.

"I fear that it is. His lawyer, Mr.
Ames, tells me so."

Laurence visited the lawyer to find
that ten thousand dollars would place
his friend beyond the power of business disappointment. He went to Adrian seeking for a young lady whose
name even he did not know. Her lovely
face, however, was vividly impressed
upon his mind.

Fortune favored Laurence's plans.
He was traversing a residence street
of Adrian when he came upon a large
walker lying on the pavement. Laurence
picked it up to find it filled with
papers and money. Turning a corner
he nearly collided with a burly figure, a flushed, excited girl.

"Found at last," he breathed with
intense satisfaction as he recognized
her, and then observing that she was
scanning walk and street with eager
eyes he spoke aloud: "Excuse me,
miss, but have you lost something?"

"Yes, but yes—a wallet containing
some very valuable papers I was taking to my father's office from the
house."

"Is that it?" questioned Laurence,
and Miss Annette Dutton took the wal-
let tendered with a joyous cry.

The incident led to their becoming
acquainted more fully, and within a
week Laurence was an accepted visitor at the Dutton home. Through
various investigation he learned that Annette knew Dudley Vernon, but she
did not seem to be intensely interested
when he was mentioned. Persistently,
however, Laurence brought up the
name of his friend on every possible
occasion, particularly before the parents of Annette. He landed Dudley, he
told of recent business troubles now
all adjusted, and Dudley on the way
to become a millionaire. Then one
day there came a vast surprise when
Annette propounded the query:

"Mr. Colby, why is it that you are always speaking of Mr. Vernon? I told
my friend, Virginia Bland, about it,
and she cannot understand your deep
interest in her fiancé."

"In her what?" cried Laurence,
amazement, hope, mystery, delight
struggling for mastery in his heart.

"Her fiancé. They were to marry,
but her parents have objected and Virginia is very unhappy."

Not very long, however—for, quickly
discerning the blunder he had made,
Laurence set about righting the situation. He learned that the photograph
must have been one given to Dudley
by Miss Bland. He now enlightened
Mr. Bland, telling him how he had
swept Dudley financially. Annette
heard of this. By that time she and Laurence had discovered their mutual
love.

"Oh, you dear, true fellow!" she
cried. "To give up all your money for
the sake of a friend!"

"Oh, no, all, Annette, dear," correct-
ed Laurence. "There is still a liberal
income from investments, and a beautiful home to be graced by the best
set table in Christendom."

"At least the happiest!" declared
beaming Annette.
